

MARK POCAN

U.S. Congressman, WI 2nd District

“Student engagement in the democratic process is essential to strengthening our democracy. It is incredibly important for elected officials to get input from the next generation of leaders while considering public policy.”

MIKE GALLAGHER

U.S. Congressman, WI 8th District

“This is an outstanding program that fosters a spirit of leaving our country better than how we inherited it through public service. It’s a great way for students in Wisconsin to understand their role in this incredible experiment of self-government, and get them involved with their elected representatives.”

Congressman Mike Gallagher meets with Washington Seminar students, including U.W.- Fox Valley student Monicca Winters.

Study Policy, Connect with Policymakers

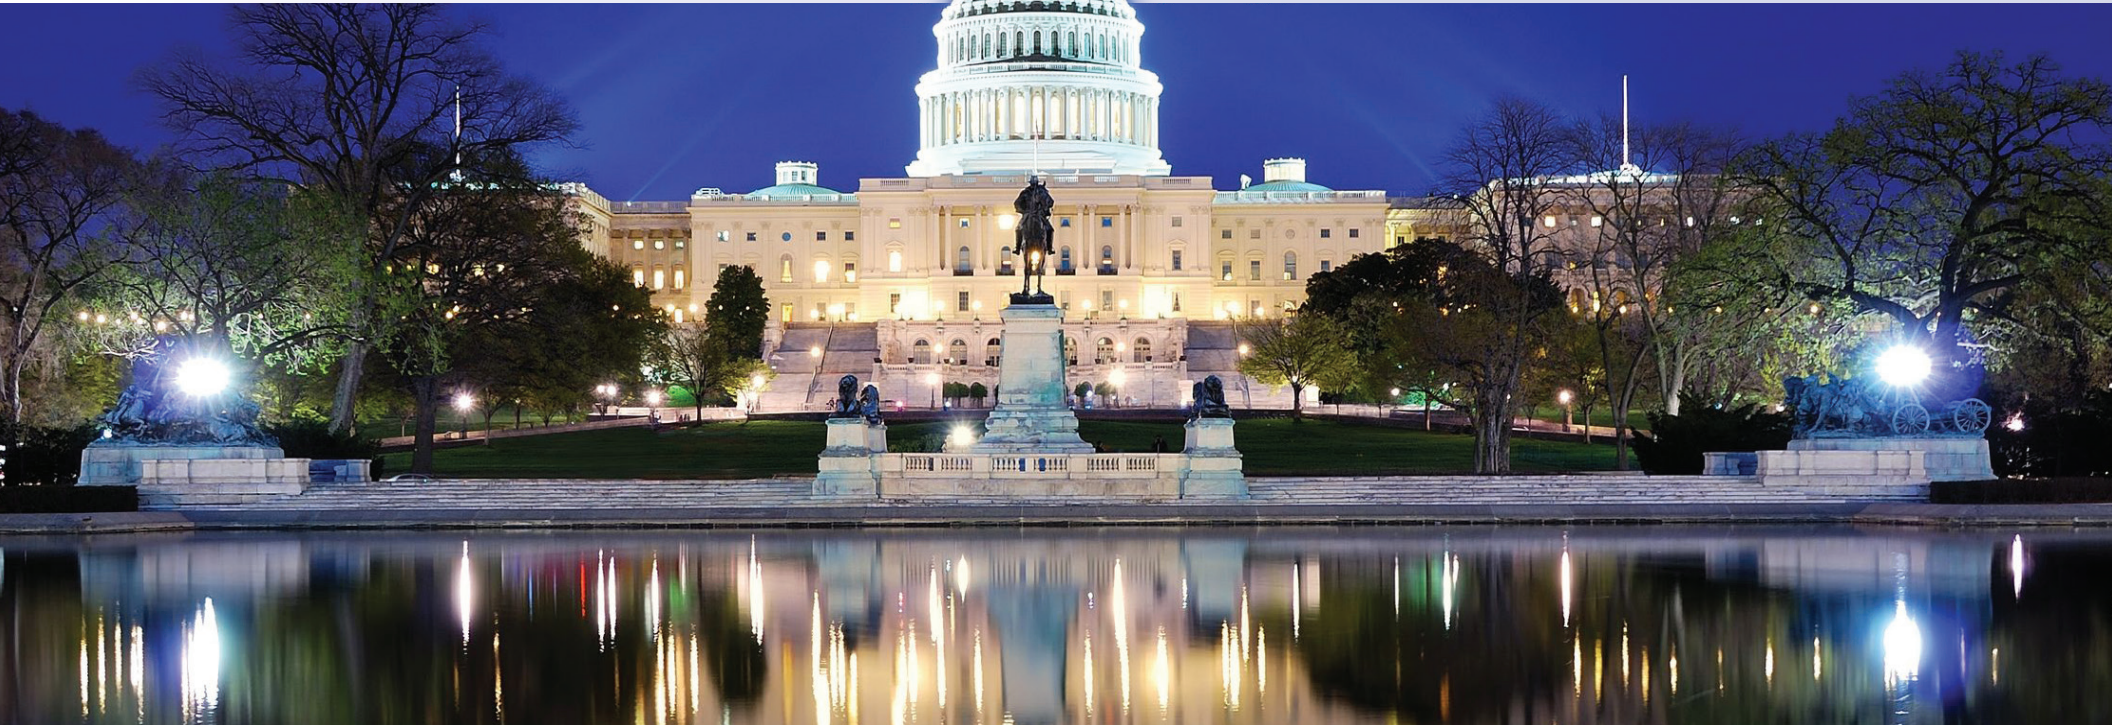

Interested in learning how our government ticks? Consider a 3-week summer program that offers a unique opportunity to see public policy first-hand in Madison, Wisconsin, and Washington, D.C. The Washington Seminar, led and taught by UW Colleges faculty, provides an up-close and personal view of the workings of government, with access to congressional and executive leaders, lobbyists and other policy influencers.

RON JOHNSON

U.S. Senator, Wisconsin

"The words of John F. Kennedy, 'Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country,' have never been more true, and this program seeks to engage students to be the solution."

TAMMY BALDWIN

U.S. Senator, Wisconsin

"Our democracy depends on engaged citizens and this exceptional program creates an opportunity for students to learn about how public service and government can make a difference."

Washington Seminar student Keshawn Hereford (UW-Rock County) was offered a paid internship with Senator Bernie Sanders.
